WHAT YOU'LL LEARN TODAY

- What e-news resources are & how you can use them to stay informed about current events

- How to use Zinio, the Library's electronic magazine service, to check out copies of popular magazines that you can keep for as long as you want

- How to use Feedly, a news aggregator service that lets you conveniently gather all the news you want to see in one place

WHAT ARE E-NEWS RESOURCES?

- Electronic news (e-News) resources are resources that allow you to access current news quickly and conveniently from your computer or mobile device

- Includes not only news websites, but also databases of magazines & newspapers, and news aggregators (services that let you gather news from multiple sources in a single place)

- e-News resources help make it easier for you to stay informed of and gain a broader perspective about current events

- Also help to prevent information overload by making it easier for you to access the news sources that are important and valuable to you

WHAT IS ZINIO?

- Zinio is a digital magazine database that you can access FOR FREE with your library card

- Lets you read magazines online from your computer, as well as download them to read on a tablet or smartphone

- Contains current issues of dozens of popular magazines, as well as back issues going back a few years (usually 2013 and onwards)

- NO LATE FEES: keep magazines you check out for as long as you want!

- NO CHECK-OUT LIMITS: check-out as many issues as you like!

- Zinio can be used by both Rochester Pub. Library & Lincoln Public Library cardholders

HOW TO USE ZINIO: SIGNING UP FOR AN ACCOUNT

- To sign-up for a Zinio account, you will need your library card number and email address

- 1. Go to rochesterlibrary.org, then click on the Card Catalog link at the top of the screen. If you have a Lincoln Library card, go to https://www.rbdigital.com/lincolnil/service/zinio/landing?

- 2. On the left-hand side of the Card Catalog page (under Rochester Library Resources) click on the Zinio link

- 3. Click on the Create New Account link in the upper-right corner of the Zinio page. You will be asked to enter your library card number, and then fill out the Zinio registration form.

- 4. You're all set to start checking out magazines!
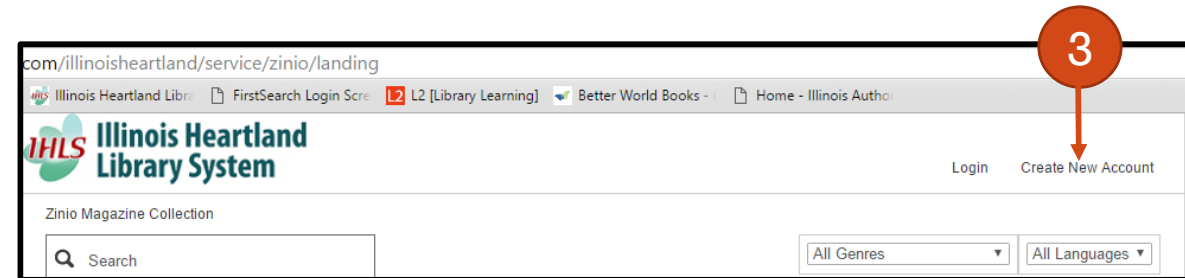

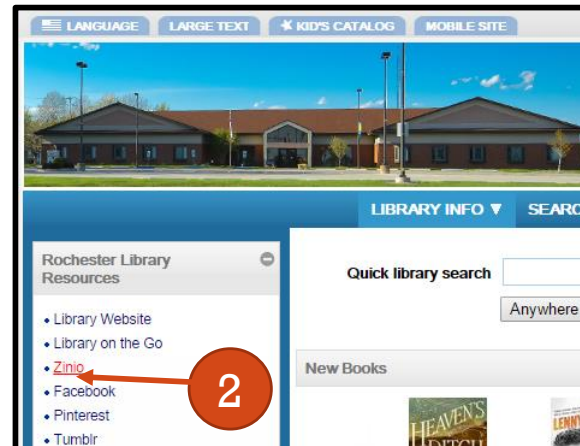

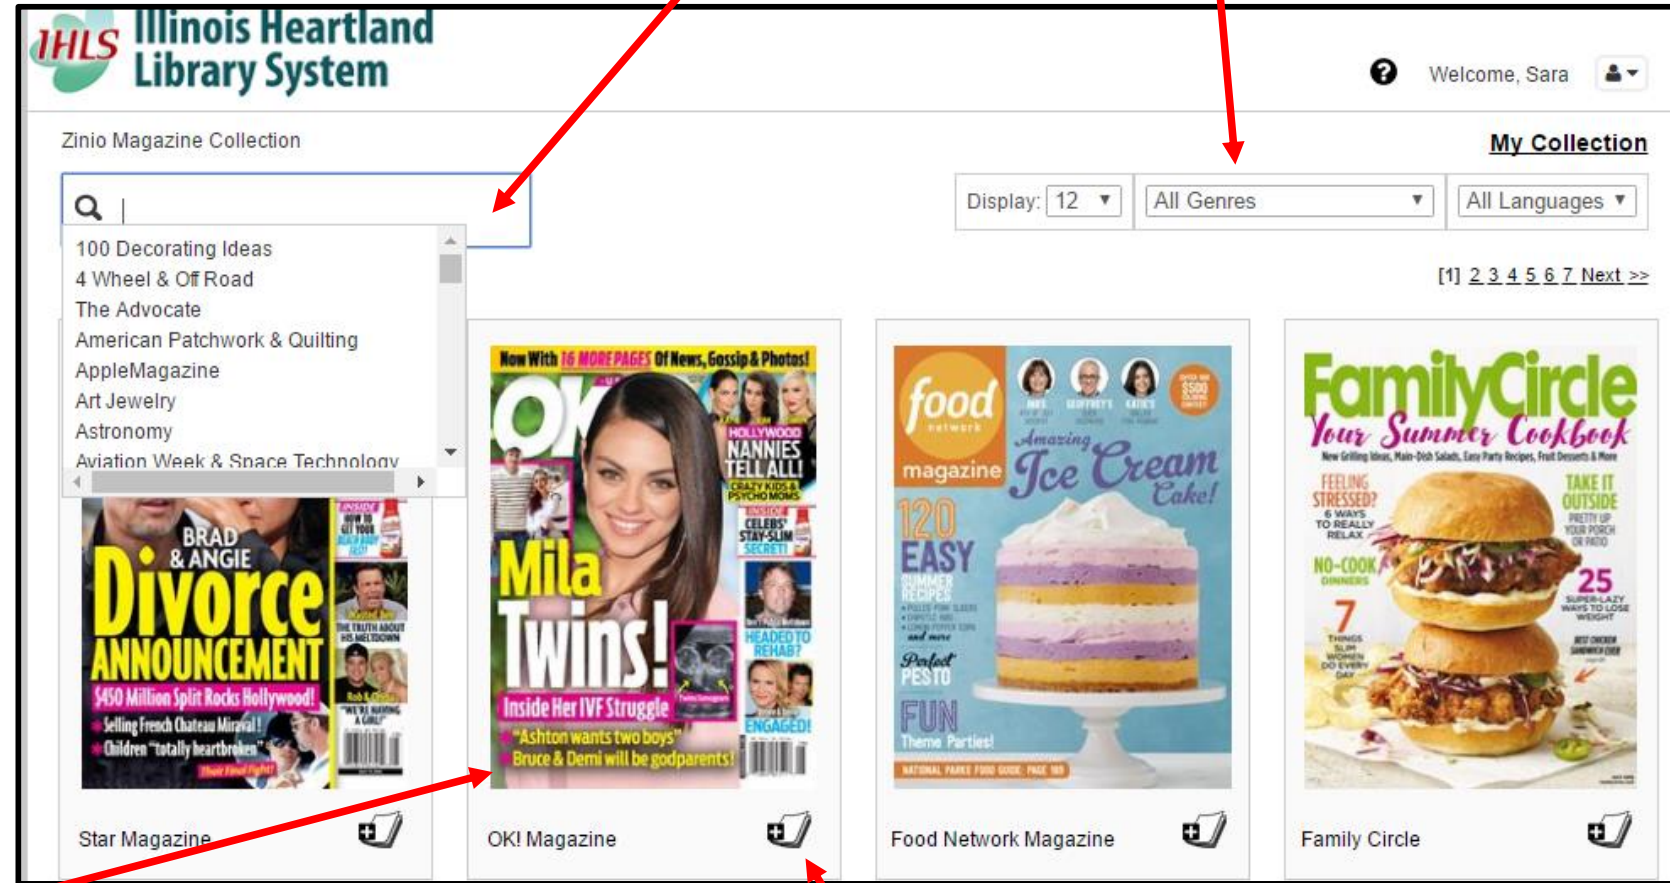

HOW TO USE ZINIO: FINDING MAGAZINES

Type a magazine title in the search box to see if it's available. On the home screen, you can also click inside the search box to get a drop-down list of all the available magazine titles.

Click on the "Genres" drop-down menu to browse for magazines by genre ("Business", "Food", "Entertainment", etc)

- Once you've created your account, you can start checking out your magazines!

- Each time you want to browse and check out magazines, you will need to login to your Zinio account in your web browser (even if you have installed the Zinio app)

WHAT IS FEEDLY?

feedly.com

- Feedly is a free news aggregator that lets you gather and read news from across the web in a single place

- Can use it not only to keep track of news updates, but also updates to your favorite blogs & websites

- Feedly can be used on your desktop and mobile devices→your content will be synced across all your devices
  - Can sign up for a Feedly account by visiting feedly.com and clicking on "Get Started for Free", or by installing and opening the Feedly app (available for iOS and Android)

HOW TO USE FEEDLY: SIGNING UP AND ADDING CONTENT

- Once you've created an account & logged in, you can start following sites and adding content to your Feedly! Two ways to do this:

| Get RSS (Rich Site Summary) information directly from the site you want to follow	Use Feedly's "Discover and Follow" feature to search and browse for content you want to follow
• RSS feeds contain useful information about new web content (like titles, publication dates, content descriptions, images, etc) • Do a Google search for "SITE YOU WANT TO SUBSCRIBE TO" + "RSS feed" to see if there is an RSS feed available for the site. Some sites might also have an RSS feed button (looks like 🟠) that you can click on to get their RSS URL. • You will need to 1. copy and paste the site's RSS URL (EX: http://rss.cnn.com/rss/cnn_world.rss) into the Feedly search box and then 2. click on the link that pops up & press the +feedly button in order to subscribe to it	• If you don't know exactly which sites you want to follow (or don't want to hunt for RSS feeds), you can a.) search for content by title or topic, or b.) browse through Feedly's "best of the web" categories • Once you find a site you'd like to subscribe to, 1. click on its name and then 2. click on the +feedly button in order to subscribe to it

Example RSS URL pasted in the Feedly search box
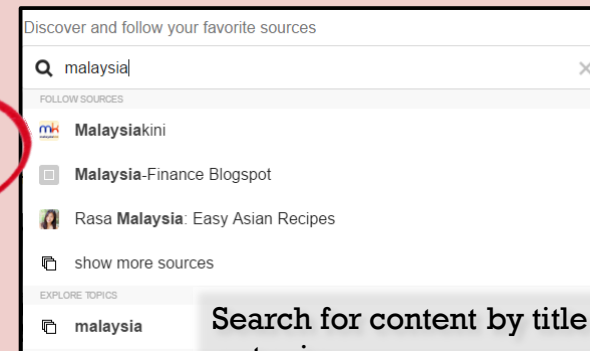

Search for content by title or topic
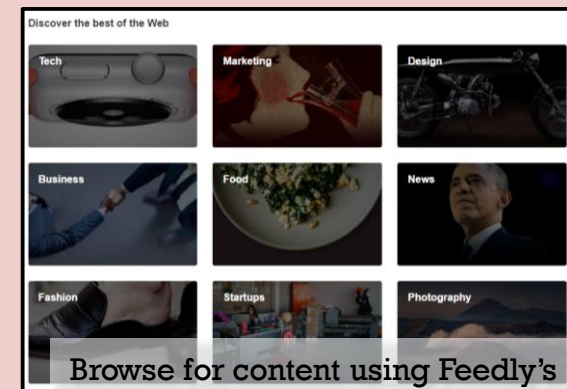

Browse for content using Feedly's "best of the web" categories

HOW TO USE FEEDLY: READING YOUR CONTENT

- Once you've added content to your Feedly, you can start reading and organizing it

- To read a post, click on the post you want to read to see the first few paragraphs and/or a brief summary. To see the full post, click on the "Continue Reading" or "Visit Website" links

- Feedly also gives you the option to 1. save articles for later, 2. share articles through social media and/or email, and 3. tag articles

There is more to war poetry than mud, wire and slaughter

Books | The Guardian by Andrew Motion / 5h // keep unread // hide // preview

Save for later Tag Get article link Share article

Poems about the first world war have defined the genre for decades. It is time to hear from new voices that reflect a wider view of conflicts

When we say "war poetry" today, the sort of writing that comes to mind is a conglomeration of Wilfred Owen, Siegfried Sassoon and the other great writers of the first world war. It means descriptions of mud, wire and slaughter on a horrific scale. It includes accusations that the top brass prolonged hostilities for no good reason and that people at home supported the cause in ignorance. It involves fierce protest as well as intense sympathy. It issues a warning.

Because poetry of this sort has been drip-fed into British schools for several generations (interestingly, the process did not start as soon as the war ended, but only began in earnest during the 1960s), it has settled in the public mind at an extraordinary depth. There are large benefits, of course. The best poetry of the first world war is exceptionally powerful - not just the lyrics of Owen and others, but the more complex and modernistic narrative of In Parenthesis by David Jones (which still has some claim to be considered a neglected masterpiece). Furthermore, by rubbing its readers' noses in the brutal facts of conflict and suffering, it possibly creates a social value as well - by helping to educate people in the human cost of war, and in the process discouraging them from starting or supporting another one.

HOW TO USE FEEDLY: COLLECTIONS & KNOWLEDGE BOARDS

How to Create Collections

1. Each time you add a site or news source to your Feedly, you will be asked to place it in a collection: a grouping of sites/news sources about similar subjects (food, business, Europe, etc)

2. Click the +New Collection button to make a new collection

3. If you want to add a site to a collection you've already made, click on the collection name to add the new site

4. You can manage your collections by clicking on the Organize Sources link (in the left-hand Feedly menu)

How to Create Knowledge Boards/Tags

1. When you find an article you want to tag, click on it to open up the preview screen
2. Click on the Knowledge Board icon
3. On the drop-down menu that appears, select the Knowledge Board you want to add the article to, or click +Create Knowledge Board to make a new one
4. You can add an article to multiple knowledge boards (just repeat steps 1 through 3)

You can see new articles in a collection by clicking on the collection name
